

LMU-Berkeley Research in the Humanities: Visiting Professorships at UC Berkeley

As part of the Academic Cooperation Program with LMU, the University of California, Berkeley, offers visiting professorships to LMU Faculty. The professorships are open to tenure and tenure-track LMU faculty in the Humanities and Humanistic Social Sciences (for a detailed list of eligible departments see www.lmu.de/international/ucb). The duration for each professorship is flexible; it may vary from 3 to 9 months depending on individual needs and interests.

Visiting professors will be given the opportunity to dedicate their time largely to their own research projects and to collaborative projects with Berkeley faculty. They will be asked to present their current research projects in Berkeley in the form of a public lecture. Depending on the length of their stay, visiting professors are also encouraged to contribute to teaching through one of the following options:

- offering or co-teaching a class to graduate or postgraduate students
- participating in an LMU-UCB workshop. Financial means for inviting doctoral students or colleagues from LMU will be available
- giving additional lectures

The Visiting Professor will receive a fellowship of $4,000 to $6,500 per month, depending on the rank of the professor. UC Berkeley will cover travel costs for transatlantic travel at a flat rate of $1,500 and will provide assistance with accommodation.

The selection committee will assess applications based on the following:

- Research Project description
- C.V. and list of publications
- Preferred period of stay in 2013-2014 (you are welcome to give more than one option)
- Preferences regarding the offering of a seminar, workshop, or lecture at Berkeley

Preference will be given to LMU faculty who can demonstrate that Berkeley is a relevant location for their research and/or who have research partners at UC Berkeley.
